Black History Month

Black History Month celebrates the vastness and variety of African American influences in American arts and culture. This year's Black History Month is particularly significant because 2013 marks big anniversaries of two historic events: the 150th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation, signed on January 1st, 1863 and the 50th anniversary of the March on Washington, held on August 28th, 1963. Recognizing that Black History spans history from the inception of the U.S. to the present-day accomplishments of African Americans, the celebration promotes a deeper understanding of the bountiful culture of African Americans.

What we now call Black History Month originated in 1926, founded by Carter G Woodson as Negro History Week. The month of February was selected in deference to Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln who were both born in that month.

The son of a slave, Carter G Woodson was born in New Canton, Virginia on December 19, 1875. He began high school at the age of 20 and then proceeded to study at Berea College, the University of Chicago, the Sorbonne, and Harvard University, where he earned a Ph.D. in 1912.
